The Baby Princess

A Fairytale

Written by Adrian

— 1 —

The Forest Feast

Once upon a time, there was a pretty little princess named Kristina who wandered deep into the dark forest late one night to visit Adrian and his glowing green skeletons. Many believe him to be an awful beast that would frighten the greatest of men, but in fact he is a kind and gentle creature with the most powerful charms. Therefore, the princess was not the least bit worried walking through the woods that night knowing he was there waiting for her. As she drew near to the party she could hear the crackling of burning wood and smell the roasting of meat. She soon saw them sitting 'round a bonfire within which there was a bubbling black cauldron. Apparently a piglet had been captured by the skeletons earlier that evening and Adrian thought it best to serve it to Kristina for dinner.

"Kristina, my love, come closer and dine with us, we were just about to devour some savoury stew and suckling pig," said Adrian with open arms in delight.

"My dear Adrian, you are far too kind sir, you know me well, for I have not eaten in ages and eagerly await your sustenance," replied Kristina with joy.

"Ages my dear? Tell me it isn't so, precious thing. Hurry and have a seat, warm yourself by my fire. The skeletons will attend to your every want and desire."

The skeletons are phantasmic apparitions that glide through the air in a glowing green haze. Together they appear as a mechanical swarm carrying out the commands of Adrian in various ways. One bringing a stump and another placing a pillow thereupon. One fetching a plate, and another fetching a glass of apple cider. And so forth.

Now it should be noted that the ways stories begin are not always the way they end. Therefore, I advise the reader to refrain from complacency. However, in regard to the pretty baby princess Kristina, I can assure you that she remains safe and secure throughout.

Kristina meets Adrian